

-The FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections.

-My husband and I both work and our time at home with our young daughter is precious. Recieving fewer telemarketing calls gives us more peaceful evenings to enjoy our family without unwanted interruptions. I used to be afraid to answer the phone and now I can almost guarantee that if the phone is ringing it is someone I would like to talk to. It has given us back our freedom.

-As a result of becoming a member of Indiana's do not call list we now receive no more than one phone solicitation a day. We used to receive more than 10 each day on average.

-Indiana's law is important because it has given us back our power as consumers and our privacy in our home.
